

Career-Long Professional Development from the National Authority on Construction and Program Management

The Construction Management Association of America (CMAA) presents a flexible, comprehensive program of Professional Development for Construction and Program Managers at every career stage.

For entry level and early-career practitioners, there's

Construction Manager in Training

CMIT is designed for new and recent graduates of engineering, construction management or university programs; college seniors; established professionals embarking on the path to become professional construction managers, and mid-career "transfers" to the profession.

Once accepted into the program, participants can use the CMIT initials after their names. The CMIT basic course, available in a self-paced online format, provides a fundamental education in all key areas of professional practice. A mentor program offers CMITs the active support of some of the industry's most seasoned practitioners.

Either as a CMIT or independently, young professionals can also take advantage of

CMAA Online Certificates

These self-paced online mini-courses address seven different vital subject areas, from Risk Management to Contract Administration. Each includes periodic evaluations and provides a certificate upon completion. They can be taken separately or as a complete course of study over a longer period of time.

CMAA Ongoing Education Opportunities

...include frequent online webinars, special topical industry meetings, a Leadership Forum every spring, and the CMAA National Conference & Trade Show in the fall. Plus, CMAA's online bookstore is a powerful educational resource.

For more information on all of these programs, visit the CMAA website at www.cmaanet.org or call George Gehringer, PhD, Vice President/Professional Development at CMAA, 703-356-2622.

All of this education and professional practice ultimately leads to

CCM

"Certified Construction Manager" is the industry's ultimate mark of professional achievement and qualification. CCM is the only personnel credentialing program in the construction industry to be accredited by the American National Standards Institute, and is widely recognized in RFPs by major public and private sector owners.

To learn more about the CMAA certification of Construction Managers, contact Jan Paul Miller at (703) 677-3364.

